

What is Project Daily Bread?

Project Daily Bread was conceived as an output coming from the felt needs of Louisians who were interviewed for scholarship purposes or who were counselled. The need for physical nourishment of these Louisians is also vital in their academic survival in college.

What is Project Daily Bread?

With limited nutrients in their physiological system, they are more prone to sickness and a divided attention between their empty stomachs and academic endeavors. Through Project Daily Bread, qualified students are provided a daily hearty lunch meal as they fulfill their academic responsibilities.

What is Project Daily Bread?

The PDB committee believes that food outlets and employees in SLU, from the goodness of their hearts and their compassion, would be the answer to these Louisians when they say these words from the Lord's Prayer....

“...and give us this day our daily bread...”

You may not know it, but every small amount you gave has a big impact on other people's lives. For me, you're not just donors but inspirations.

Ever since I graduated from college, I have personally vowed to help others as how all of you had made the effort to help the less fortunate.

Many thanks to the staff of the Guidance Center and the donors for making this program beneficial to all of us. You did not just help me on my academics but you also made my parents proud and helped them ease our financial concerns.

Thank you very much for the support you have given me through the PDB Program during my college days.

With a full stomach, I was able to focus more on my studies and got me to where I am now, a certified public accountant. I hope this brings joy to your heart, knowing that you have helped me during the crucial time of my college life. Thank you and God bless you all.
